

What to do if your accelerator sticks...

If you ease up on the accelerator, but the engine keeps racing, shift immediately into neutral and brake gently until you can pull off the road safely. If the accelerator is revving dangerously high, turn the ignition off.

Push the accelerator sharply to the floor, then let it go. If the pedal is still stuck, turn off the engine; do not drive any farther. Then look under the bonnet to see if something is stuck against the throttle linkage; free it if possible.

The throttle return spring may be broken. Bring your car into our shop for repair.
